drumlish poitín, cognac, americano vermouth, benedictine, bitters

Ireland is the birthplace of whiskey (the name coming from Uisce Beatha, the “water of life”), where it is claimed that monks returning from pilgrimages to the Mediterranean brought back distillation techniques that were then applied to the local grains. “Poitín”, or “little pot”, was the first distilled spirit in the world (or so believed) around 600AD but it was outlawed when the English tried to rule Ireland in the 1600's. It was only legalized again in 1989.
